*April 7, 1926 - Lightning started a disastrous oil fire at San Luis Obispo, California, which lasted five days, spread over 900 acres, and burned nearly six million barrels of oil. Flames reached 1,000 feet and the fire temperature was estimated at 2,500 degrees. The fire spawned thousands of whirlwinds with hundreds the size of small tornadoes. One vortex traveled one mile to the east-northeast of the blaze, destroying a small farm house and killing two people. Damage totaled $15 million.
